

What is RCLC?

Reading Community Learning Centre is a charity that helps ethnic minority women and their families who live in Reading. We reach out and empower isolated and vulnerable women to grow their skills, confidence and independence. We do this through learning, support and friendship.

Most of our women are migrants who speak little or no English and have limited experience outside their home, although a few are skilled women who have formal qualifications in their home country but lack the English skills/experience and 'know-how' needed to find a job in the UK. We attract 300 learners each year from 24 countries.

RCLC provides informal non accredited English conversation classes, reading and writing, IT, sewing, health, beauty/confidence building and arts classes. As well as that the Centre offers an in-house volunteering programme, information, advice and guidance & an Ofsted accredited crèche so women can access our services and not struggle with childcare.

RCLC offers three rooms for hire, to voluntary and community groups at subsidised rates. The rooms can also be hired at competitive rates by public bodies, private organisations and individuals, and are suitable for conferences, training, and meetings for up to 15 people.

Photocopy is available for 4 pence per sheet.

How to find us:

RCLC is located right in the heart of Reading town centre, a short walk from the Oracle, and approx. 15 mins walk from Reading main train & bus station. Buses from the station and other parts of Reading stop close to the Centre on London Street. If you are travelling by car the Centre is easily accessible from J 10 & 11 on the M4 .

Parking is limited and only available outside of office hours, so we recommend you use the Saxon Court, Queen's or Oracle car parks which are all five minutes' walk from our building. There is also some short term street parking directly on London Street or on St Giles Close.
